Introduction

Lanka Holidays is a rental listing website in Sri Lanka. This is important for those who is in the travel industry. Renters (accommodation and car) can easily place their advertisements. Also, tourists/travelers can easily find accommodation and vehicles easily without paying a commission. This Website has a lot of usability issues such as (Website is not mobile responsive. Some details are not available such as map and availability calendar, price is not visible in some listings, so many third-party ads load on the web pages, User interfaces (colors, fonts) are not eye catching, they are seeming to be very old, Unfriendly and non-intuitive site navigation, in some page's font size is very small, some pages content not aligned well, etc.). This project aim is to identify usability issues of the interfaces on a website and refine them any user research techniques. To avoid usability problems using a low-fidelity prototype, each team members took three pages and sketches two variants with 6 interfaces. Then selected the best 3 interface using ideation techniques and justify their selection. We developed only the front-end of the website so that it would be fully functional, eliminating the problems identified at an early stage. Finally, we used high fidelity prototype figma and redesign the website interfaces creative manner with neatness.

Methodology

Our specific team goal was to redesign a fully functional existing not user-friendly website for the HCI module using human computer interaction techniques. We selected www.lankaholidays.com website for our assignment. And for that, first, we need to gather all the usability issues faces by users when they using lankaholidays.com website. And our final expected output was to redesign this website using valuable lessons learned from HCI module through the semester.

First we found 3 users (2 expert users and 1 new user) to find the usability issues what they face when they use the website. For gathering usability issues, we created 3 personas and 3 Scripts for contextual inquiries for 3 users. For gathering usability issues, we directly interviewed our 3 user by using Script and gave them some task to do. And through several questions and tasks, we were able to identify usability issues what they faced. After that we gathered usability issues and rate the as High, Medium, and low. To confirm further the issues we did video transcripts for our 3 interviews and again gather the issues and rate them as high, medium and low.

Next we would want to create low fidelity prototype for our selected interfaces. For that we use www.mockflow.com low fidelity interface design tool. Individually we created 2 low fidelity interface for selected interface and totally we created 30 low fidelity interfaces for selected 15 interfaces. After successfully created the low fidelity interfaces, the whole team able pointed out things that need to change further in created low fidelity interfaces. After the feedback received by our group members, we designed our final 30 low fidelity interfaces with assembling where it needs to be change. Finally we individually selected 1 interface to design for final project and give reasons for our selection. In this process ideation techniques like Brainstorming, Brainwriting, Challenging assumptions, Prototyping, Sketching/Sketch storming, SCAMPER help to select the best low fidelity sketches from created sketches.

Finally, we would want to create high fidelity user interfaces for selected low fidelity sketches. For that we selected figma.com online design tool. After the creation we design user experiment individually for evaluating the created web pages and share UIs with group members and assign some tasks to perform in the relevant UI and get feedback from group members. Using each other's feedback finally we build a our final prototypes for the projects.

On this assignment we used mockflow.com to create low fidelity prototypes and figma.com to create high fidelity prototypes.

Summary

First, we had to identify a website with bad user experience. As first step, all members did research and found several websites. Then we discussed and agreed to choose "lankaholidays.com" for assignment. Then we found people who use website. We created personas and interviewed website users to identify usability issues. Then assigned ratings for usability issues identified. Then we created two variants of wire frames for each page. One member had to create 6 wireframes. From those two variants members had to select one variant. Then we designed user interface using Figma. After that all user interface designs combined together and connected flow. Then team members made a video to describe how user interfaces flows. Finally, project report was made.

Future work

Our group hope to use MERN stack technology to create this website. MERN stands for MongoDB, Express, React, Node, after the four key technologies that make up the stack. Our team hopes to create this LankaHolidays website as soon as possible and 100% complete. In addition to the features that are currently expected to be added, our team are looking forward to adding some new features according to the users' ideas and It also hopes to increase the scope of this website and increase its user friendliness, taking into account the needs of users.

Once created, we hope to contact the owners of this LankaHoliday website, discuss with them, introduce the new web site, sell it to them, or release it online with their permission. There is also an idea to create a mobile app for this website and it is hoped to focus more on it after launching the website. It also hopes to increase the scope of this website and increase its user friendliness, considering the needs of users.
